Environment

OIC applications do not allow authenticated access from arbitrary origins. All domains belonging to arbitrary origins need to be registered in the allowed list of sites for cross-origin resource sharing (CORS) processing. Integrations/Libraries
Retrieve, import, export, and delete libraries. JavaScript libraries provide a means to register and organize JavaScript for use in orchestration integrations. Library functions are automatically available for your integrations. API Library Jar The API library jar file contains Javascript files/functions which will be consumed in integrations as callouts. You download the library jar file to modify the JS functions. You can then import the modified library jar as a new library or update the existing library. API Library Metadata Once you have imported the API library, you configure it using the API library metadata XML file. The API library metadata file contains details such as classification and data types of input/output parameters of JS functions. You import the library metadata XML file using the library id. You can export the metadata XML file for mass update of JS function configuration details and import it back into the system. Delete a Library Version (op-ic-api-integration-v1-libraries-id-delete.html) Method: DELETE Path: /ic/api/integration/v1/libraries/{id} Export a Library (op-ic-api-integration-v1-libraries-id-archive-get.html) Method: GET Path: /ic/api/integration/v1/libraries/{id}/archive

Integrations/Lookups

Retrieve, create, update, and delete lookups.

Lookups are reusable tables that map the different terms used to describe the same item across your applications.

For example, one application uses a specific set of codes to describe countries, while another application uses a different set of codes to describe the same countries. Lookups can be used for items such as mapping gender codes, nationality codes, currency codes, or any type of information that your applications must share with each other but that they represent differently.
